Joe makes a journey from coast to coast across the north of England tracing a path from the industrial mouth of the river Tees, through the stark and beautiful limestone scenery of the Yorkshire Dales, to the Lake District, arguably England's most romantic and spectacular landscape. Along the way Joe reveals the aesthetic and physical challenges these beautiful landscapes offer a photographer.

Fascinated by industry and agriculture, as well as the much older signature of climate and geology in shaping these landscapes, Joe delivers an intensely curious eyewitness account that narrates the landscape's story. The film is a perfect combination of technical instruction and inspiration making it a 'must have' for all photographers, be they advanced or amateur, but also for all those who simply love to be in the great outdoors.
